Wool Market.

NEW YORK, May 29—Business for the week in wool has been fair but as regards prices nothing favorable can be said Manufacturers enter the market only when compelled and their purchases owing to the depressed condition of the goods in the market, are of the smallest dimensions There is decidedly a weak tone to the market caused by anticipated heavy receipts of several clips, but more particularly the California spring and for later prices are at least a cent or two below those ruling a week ago. The sales made of Newport Fully are as low as 47 cents and from that figure up to 51 Auction sale of Sydney on the 26th only a partial success in the cargo there were 1 283 bales, but only 601 were sold the remainder being withdrawn in consequence of the price being unsatisfactory to the importer though it is the general impression among the trade that he will never have an opportunity to realize such full prices again The range for that sold was 41½@48¼ cents. The new clip from Georgia is being received and finds purchasers at 35@40 cents. New Texas is slow of sale, owing to difference in views of buyers and sellers. Some small lots of Kentucky fleece have been received. One parcel of 7 000 pounds unwashed combing sold for 40 cents Sales for the week are 250 bales Cape in bond for export to Canada, 37½c, gold, 800 do Australian, 47@61c for clothing and 55@58c for combing 11 Donskoi on private terms 10,000 lbs new spring Cal, 22@24c for short, [illegible] for choice free 35,000 lbs do old stock, 28@30c, 10,000 lbs fall do 15@20c 3 000 bags scoured 60@ 75 12 000 lbs. Texas 23½@26c for Western and 28@ [illegible] for Eastern 25 bags super pulled 46@48c combing 40@40c.

BOSTON May 29—Fair average business has been done in wool so far as the amount of sales is concerned but the trade continues quite dull and unsatisfactory manufacturers purchasing only for immediate wants. Fine fleeces are in better demand but remain without improvement Sales have been 13,000 Ohio and Pennsylvania fleeces at from 50@60c, including choice XXX Pennsylvania at [illegible] but most XX Ohio and Pennsylvania at 52@53c and these are now inside figures for choice XX Michigan, and choice fleeces have moved off slowly and at comparatively low prices. The demand for pulled wool has been fair and prices continue steady. Supers ranging from 50@56 cents are most in request. California wool has been arriving quite freely The stock is now increasing quite rapidly Sales have been again large comprising 430 000 pounds at 2@38 cents for spring and 20@24 cents for fall. Some of recent arrivals have been of very handsome quality, and in consequence a high range of prices has been sustained although the market is considered easier for this description to buy, and there is more pressure to sell. Good average will not bring over 30c, to 35 cents for choice and any advance in the latter rate is obtained only for fancy lots There have been sales of Michigan at 47@50 cents Western and other fleeces, 47½@48½ cents, combing and delaine, 52@55 cents unwashed combing 41@50 cents. unwashed, 30@35 cents super X and pulled 37@ [illegible]

THIRD TERM.

President Grant Speaks

WASHINGTON May 30—The President has written the following letter to Gen Harry White president of the recent Pennsylvania Republican State convention

WASHINGTON May 29 1875

DEAR SIR: A short time subsequent to the presidential election of 1872 the press a portion of it hostile to the Republican party—particularly so to the administration—started the cry of Cæsarism and third term calling lustily for me to define my position on the latter subject I believe it beneath the dignity of the office which I have been twice called to fill to answer the question before the subject should be presented by competent authority to make a nomination or by a body of such dignity and authority as not to make a reply a fair subject of ridicule In fact I have been surprised that so many sensible persons in the Republican party should permit their enemy to force upon them and the party an issue which cannot add strength to the party no matter how met by a body of the dignity and authority of a party convention to make nominations for state officers The second State in the Union having considered the question I deem it not improper that I should speak. In the first place I never sought the office for a second nor even the first nomination To the first I was called from a life position one created by congress expressly for me for supposed services rendered to the republic The position vacated I liked It would have been more agreeable to me to have retained it until such time as Congress might have consented to my retirement with the rank and a portion of the emoluments I so much need to a home where the balance of my days might be spent in peace and the enjoyment of domestic quiet relieved of the cares which have oppressed me constantly for fourteen years but I was made to believe that the public good called me to make the sacrifice Without seeking the office for the second term the nomination was tendered me by the unanimous vote of delegates of all the States and Territories selected by the Republicans of each to represent their whole number for the purpose of making a nomination I cannot say I was not pleased at this and the overwhelming endorsement their action received at the election following, but it must be remembered that all sacrifices except that of comfort had been made in accepting the first term Then too such a fire of personal abuse and slander had been kept up for four years notwithstanding the conscious performance of my duties to the best of my understanding, though I admit in the light of subsequent events many times subject to fair criticism that an endorsement from those who had to govern the republic was a gratification that it is only human to have appreciated and enjoyed Now for the third term I do not want it any more than I did the first I would not write nor utter a word to change the will of the people in expressing and having their choice The question of the number of terms allowed one executive can only come up fairly in the shape of a proposition to amend the constitution—a shape in which all political parties can participate in fixing the length of time, or number of terms for which one person shall be eligible for the office of President Until such amendment is adopted the people cannot be restricted in their choice by resolution further than now restricted as to age, nationality &c It may happen in the future history of the country that to change the executive because he has been eight years in office will prove unfortunate if not disastrous The idea that any man could elect himself President or even nominate himself is preposterous It is a reflection on the intelligence and patriotism of the people to suppose such a thing possible Any man can destroy his chances for the office but no one can force an election or nomination. I am not nor have I ever been a candidate for renomination I would not accept a nomination were it tendered unless it came under such circumstances as to make it an imperative duty—circumstances not likely to arise I congratulate the convention over which you presided for the harmony which prevailed and for the excellent ticket put in the field and which I hope may be triumphantly elected

With great respect, your obedient servant

TELEGRAMS TO THE EVENING PAPERS

[From Saturday s Bulletin]

Destructive Fire at Worcester, Mass.

WORCESTER May 28—The most destructive fire ever experienced in this city occurred this morning At 3 o clock an alarm was sounded and at the same moment flames were seen in the fourth story of the Taylor block, on Main street opposite the old South church block, which was completed two years ago and cost nearly $150 000 The fire originated in the upper story of John P Chollar s extensive furniture warehouse which was crowded with inflammable material through which the flames spread with surprising rapidity The entire department were soon on the ground but their efforts proved unavailing except to protect surrounding property The flames soon spread to another building which at one time was a solid mass of flames The three upper stories and contents were entirely destroyed the lower floors were ruined and the entire block will have to be rebuilt again to have it complete The total loss will reach nearly $300 000, mostly covered by insurance

The Grasshopper Army Moving On.

LEXINGTON Mo May 28—There are millions of them is the report from all parts of the country Grass and dog fennel will not last much longer As soon as they are gone the grasshoppers will make an onslaught on the crops Their wings are developing very fast. It will not be very many days till the largest portion of them will be able to emigrate

RICHMOND, Mo., May 28.—Since the heavy rain of Wednesday the hoppers are travelling in a southeasterly direction eating everything as they go There is no garden in this locality that they have not eaten up

NEW ULM Minn May 28—Spring wheat is doing well in this vicinity but it is feared it will be destroyed by grasshoppers which are very thick in some localities The probable yield cannot be ascertained yet

OMAHA May 28—Heavy showers have prevailed throughout the State during the past two days greatly benefiting the crops and proving fatal to the grasshoppers.

Election in Virginia.

RICHMOND May 28—Returns from the municipal and county elections held yesterday show a Conservative victory with large gains The election was general throughout the State which according to the new charter are to be held at the same time with the State election in November

The "Evening Express" on the Holyoke Disaster.

NEW YORK May 28—The Evening Express commenting on the Holyoke disaster says Too free use of lights in church ought to be prohibited and especially of movable lights It is in Roman Catholic and ritualistic churches that candles are used and such a calamity as this in Massachusetts ought to be a life long argument against their use

The Papal Envoys Interview the Sioux Chiefs.

WASHINGTON May 28—The Papal Envoys visited the Sioux Indians yesterday They were much interested in them particularly in Spotted Tail with whom they had a conversation One of them told him that in addition to having a Great Father in Washington he had another across the water, who was much concerned about him and who would pray for him often and in return he too, Spotted Tail should pray for him Spotted Tail evidently thought he meant across the Potomac for he said Well if I have another Great Father I want to go and see him at once and see what better arrangements I can make about the Black Hills country than I have made with the Great Father at the White House.

CLACKAMAS COUNTY LANDS

MIDDLE SANDY May 21 1875

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Allow me space in your columns to call the attention of immigrants the State board of commissioners of immigration and real estate agents to (in my opinion) one of the best and most central sections of Oregon—where railroad lands may be had at railroad prices school lands at the same and lands in the hands of speculators I presume at about the same with a large amount of lands yet to be taken by homesteads and pre-emptions It is timbered to be sure but on nearly every forty acres are openings or light timber of from one to twenty acres together, easily cleared And this commences within ten or twelve miles south east of Portland and extends to the distance of probably thirty miles, in this direction up Sandy river That such a section of country within this distance of Portland remains unsettled, is very strange but come and see

The best location for a saw and grist mill that I have any knowledge of is adjacent to this district in this district or in Powell s valley This section is only a continuation of Powell s valley I have been in Oregon upwards of twenty years—have traveled over most of the State as well as Washington and Idaho Territories and the past winter from one end of the Sound to the other, and am sanguine in the opinion that no other such section of country in a locality that will in any wise compare with this does not yet remain unsettled

SOMETHING IN REPLY TO AN ITEM' IN A SUNDAY PAPER

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

The reporter of a weekly paper takes a correspondent to task for asking him why it is that the "paper referred to" allows the concerts lately given by Frank Gilder to pass unnoticed I can conscientiously say that over nine tenths of the readers of that paper will not coincide with the reply If I understand rightly it is the mission of newspapers in general to give notices of all deserving public entertainments, as well as other news of the day, whether the reporter be musically inclined or not In the item referred to occurs the following We have enough to keep our mind occupied without attending places of amusement and our leisure hours we prefer to enjoy in other ways ' For the credit of the other newspapers in Portland I hope that this does not express the sentiment of the press of this city The excuse set forth by the reporter in question that he was not furnished with front seats is too thin ' as the back seats of the hall in which concerts were given are as good as any in the place I attended two of the concerts and the programmes of both were successfully carried out The performance of the artist, Frank Gilder (for he is an artist in every sense of the word), pleased all. It should be the duty of all our newspapers to encourage artists who visit our city in their undertakings, for by treating them otherwise how are we to get others here?

Some time since, when in San Francisco, I attended a concert at which Mr Gilder performed If I recollect rightly, he was encored three times I refer to this merely to show in what estimation he was held by the public of San Francisco As another proof of his success as a pianist, I can add his series of popular concerts given in San Francisco recently They were thirty in number, and nightly crowded by the elite of the city. Another word and I am done The paper referred to claims to be a "family paper," and no doubt is distributed amongst several households. Is it not in place for a paper claiming to be such, to report notices of all concerts, entertainments, &c ? Respectfully, AMATEUR.

LETTER FROM SALEM

ATTEMPT AT ROBBERY—WHY THOSE FLAGS WERE FLYING—GENERAL GOSSIP, ETC.

SALEM, May 29, 1875

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

A bold but unsuccessful attempt at robbery took place in this city last evening. D O. Wagner, the gentlemanly agent for Wells, Fargo & Co, s express office, who has apartments at the residence of Hon. Jos Hoyt, on Commercial street, immediately opposite Marion Square, was awakened about 12 o'clock last night by some one endeavoring to secure entrance into his room, located on the second floor, The intruder, whoever he was, climbed a tree growing immediately underneath the window, and the noise occasioned in so doing awoke Mr Wagner, who at once sprang out of bed and saw the man distinctly, who had heard the alarm and was "stepping down and out" with as much haste as possible. Having a revolver in his possession, Mr Wagner fired one shot at him, but, owing to the darkness, without avail. It is supposed the man was after the keys to the safe. It is to be regretted Mr Wagner missed his man in this instance

PICNICS.

A picnic excursion out to the Looney farm enticed a number of our young people out of the city this morning They will remain over Sunday, and be joined by another jolly crowd to-morrow

Delegations from various parts of the State will meet in this city to-morrow, to make arrangements for the annual Jewish picnic. It will be held either in this city or at Aurora.

AMUSEMENTS, ETC

Fred Geer, of your city, is here billing Fulford s Rosedale Troupe for Monday evening next, at Reed's Opera House The troupe being in every way a deserving one, we hope they may secure a crowded house. They are traveling by private conveyance overland to California.

The entertainment given at the University chapel last evening by the Alka and Atheneum societies was a [illegible] success financially and otherwise The various performers did their parts well, and the large audience went home well pleased with what they saw and heard

The Alumni of the Willamette University are making extensive arrangements for their annual reunion next month. We understand that Oregon's poet, Sam. L. Simpson, will favor them with a poem suitable to the occasion.

The hills a few miles south of the city are literally covered with wild strawberries this season and Salemites are luxuriating on the fruit. Numerous are the excursions thither among the patresfamiliarum and the little folks.

A bone of contention between the young ladies of the city is, who shall become the happy possessor of that life-sized photograph of our handsome young friend Mart L Chamberlin now on exhibition in front of Catterlin's gallery, on State street.

WIDE AWAKE.

The Dallas Itemizer sets it pretty deep sometimes. Take this, from the last number, for a sample.

Our last week's editorials were hugely disgusting to the faithful on either side. Now we knew they would be, but we did think they would have the manliness to come out and say so, instead of that, they twist up their righteous countenances and say, ' oh, they were too long'" We would simply say, that once in a while it takes a column to tell and illustrate the truth, and whenever occasion demands, we calculate to do it, if it takes ten columns. If you do not like the editorials, don t read them—we are running this newspaper, and we propose to run it precisely as we please, and you that don't like our style, simply send your paper back and we will send you one-half dozen copies in the place of it. Bear one thing in mind, that we are thoroughly independent, and that we don't give a "hooter" for your support, friendship, pleased or displeased, or anything else, A newspaper that has to pander to the whims of every subscriber is not worth the paper it is printed on.

MONDAY MORNING, MAY 31, 1875.

THE THIRD TERM.

If the country has been amazed at the silence of President Grant on the subject of the candidacy for a third term, while almost the entire press has been discussing it for months, and while it has entered into political campaigns and caused a vast amount of loss to the Republican party; there must be still greater surprise on reading his letter (which we give this morning) in response to the anti-third-term resolution of the Pennsylvania Republican State Convention. That he should have answered that resolution with an elaborate argument against the principle of limiting the number of terms of our President to two at most, is indeed remarkable. But when he makes the application—of his argument to the case in hand, by announcing his willingness to accept a nomination—for such is the only construction of which his language is capable—there is left no room for further surprises. The resolution to which this letter purports to be a response, is a plain and unqualified condemnation of the possible third term aspirations of the President, and he replies to it, not with a disavowal, which would help the party greatly in the approaching election in that "second State in the Union," but with a presentation of his name to burden the party in that election and in all those that are to follow. It is true he says he would not accept a nomination "unless it came under such circumstances as to make it an imperative duty", but that is what they all say. Every one has heard the same a hundred times before, and almost in the exact phraseology employed by the President. In this very letter he says he was disinclined to accept his first nomination, but "was made to believe that the public good called" him to do so. To say he accepted the nomination in response to a call of the "public good" is tantamount to saying it was an "imperative duty." But no other, perhaps, in the nation had any idea that there was any such unusual state of affairs on hand at that time, as made it peculiarly important that he and only he should be nominated for President. He was nominated simply because a combination of circumstances made him a very strong candidate to get votes, not because nobody else was deemed equal to the duties and requirements of the President's office. So when no other person is able to see that "public good" calls, and that it is consequently President Grant's "imperative duty" to answer, he will see both those facts very plainly, if only the next national convention will tender him the nomination. Nothing less than that does he say in this letter. The third term riddle is solved, and President Grant is a candidate for re-election. The Cleveland resolutions of Saturday, following close on the heels of those of the Pennsylvania convention, are opportune, and it behooves the Republicans, if they wish to carry the State of Ohio, to do as the Cleveland Republicans have recommended. Any equivocation, after this letter, will insure the triumph of the opposition by an overwhelming majority.

A NEW PHASE OF THE RAILWAY WAR.

The railway war, on Saturday, took on new complications and a more serious aspect. The board of directors, elected at the first meeting Thursday, which, for convenience, we shall denominate the anti-Holladay board, having been deprived by force of the property of the company, sought a remedy in the courts of justice. A bill in chancery was filed by them in the name of the Oregon Central Railway Company, against W. L. Halsey, Geo. W. Weidler, Thomas Mountain, J. N. Dolph, Michael Conley, Al. Jennings, J. Brandt, Jr., and —DeClark, reciting their forcible seizure of the trains and other property of the corporation, and their threats to continue in forcible possession thereof, alleging that all the defendants, except W. L. Halsey, were irresponsible and unable to respond in damages, and praying for an injunction restraining any interference by them, or their employes, with the possession of the property or trains. The provisional writ was granted by the court, and duly served. Mr. Weidler and Mr. Brandt, who had been active before, promptly recognized the force of the writ, a restraining order, and expressed their willingness to abide by the orders of the court in the premises. Mr. Halsey, on the contrary, secured a new force of men, and seized the train again. Rumor has it that he remarked at the time, that he was not going to obey the order of the court, as he was amply able to give bonds if he should be arrested. We do not vouch for the truth of this report, and only give it as it came to us. If the report should be found true, the whole order-loving and law-abiding community would approve of a proceeding which the law allows in such cases, and which does not admit of any giving bonds. It is also reported that an attorney of some prominence in the city advised the violation of the injunction; but this can not be true, as no attorney who has the first particle of professional pride or of regard for his relations to the administration of the law, would be guilty of advising or abetting such conduct. The fact that a report so manifestly false as this latter is in circulation, casts discredit on the rumor respecting Mr. Halsey's behavior. We have been unable to trace these two reports to their source, and we therefore assume they are untrue.

But it is an undoubted fact that the injunction was violated. That we have on unquestionable authority. Leaving out all the reported circumstances of aggravation, the open violation of the order of the court ought not be tolerated any longer than the time necessary to bring the parties to account. There ought not to be, and we trust there is not, any person or company of persons in this community who can defy the decrees of the courts with impunity. We wish it distinctly understood that nothing we have said has been intended as an expression or intimation of an opinion whether the proceedings of the anti-Holladay board of directors give them the legal right to the possession of the company's property. That is a question for the courts, and newspapers that appreciate their duties and have no disposition to interfere for personal purposes with the administration of justice, will forbear to discuss it. But on the other hand the question whether or not the process of the courts is to be respected, is one of public concern, and every man is a party to it. When the infamous Judge Durell made the order which put the Kellogg usurpation in possession of the State government in Louisiana, the people of the United States generally were satisfied it was an outrageous order, but they nevertheless supported the President in his declared purpose to see to it that the order, until vacated by competent judicial authority, should be enforced, even if it required all the power of the Federal Government to enforce it. So in this case Gaston and the persons co-operating with him may be found in the end not to have the legal rights they are trying to assert; but so long as the provisional order made by the circuit court remains in force, defiance of it, by any of the parties, no matter who they are, is a thing not to be countenanced for a moment.

SOME REMARKS FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE MERCURY.

We lately said, in substance, that we cared little for party, and should support the best man in the field for Congress, without stopping long to inquire to what party he belonged; and in this respect we were, and proposed to be, as independent of the Independents as of the other parties. In this the Mercury has found a mare's nest. That paper thinks there is ground in these declarations for the inference that if the Independents should nominate "whom we considered unfit for the position," we would refuse to support him. We are astounded that the Mercury should make so much ado, at this particular time, over the declaration we have put forth, in some form, from time to time, and in all dozens of times, during the last two years and more. We are surprised, indeed, that any one should suppose the Mercury's proposition depended on inference. And in order that the Mercury may not be in doubt on the subject, and may be able to make out of its discovery all the capital there is in it, we shall endeavor to make the matter so clear that even the Mercury will be no longer under the necessity of sitting on the ragged edge of suspense, by stating unconditionally and unqualifiedly that, should the Independents bring out a man who in our judgment is unfit for the position—an event we do not expect to witness—we shall, unless the other candidates are equally unfit, refuse to support him and shall oppose his election, and if there is any man calling himself independent who will vote for a man unfit, in his opinion, for the position he runs for, merely because of the nomination of the candidate by an Independent convention, he has not the kind of independence that the country needs. He is yet in the bonds of partisan iniquity. "The independent voter and the scratched ticket are the hope of the nation." That expresses it all, and the sooner the country comes to realize the truth thus stated, the better for every interest, material, social, moral and intellectual, which enters into our civilization and prosperity.

The New Hampshire Monitor, says a dispatch of this morning, calls for the impeachment of Governor Weston, and the call creates considerable sensation. The ground of the demand is not stated in the dispatch, but it must be something more than mere partisan fault-finding, to attract so much attention. The Monitor is an old paper, of high character, and the leading Republican paper of the State, and Weston has been Governor one term, and is now serving the second term. He is the Democratic leader in New Hampshire politics.

If Mr. Abbott chooses to denounce certain persons, he alone is responsible; and then he proposes to support the nominee of the party, though he be a schemer pickled in gin. Candidly, the Guard does not. It purposes to sustain and advocate Democratic principles; and its candidate must be a gentleman competent to do these things.—Eugene Guard.

Good for the Guard! The only way to keep a "schemer pickled in gin," or something else just as bad from being forced on the people by the party conventions, is to let the politicians know that such candidates will be bolted from the turn-loose.

Senator Kelly has the thanks of this office for favors in the shape of public documents.

THOROUGHBRED MERINO BUCKS AND EWES.

I OFFER FOR SALE, AT MY RANCH, IN LINN county, seven miles from Harrisburg,

40 MERINO BUCKS,
1, 2 and 3 years old.

40 MERINO EWES,
1, 2, 3 and 4 years old

Which will be sold at reduced reasonable rates for cash, or for good notes, at 12 months time, bearing interest. These are the FIRST CHOICE of the

MONSON & JEWETT IMPORTATION,

Brought to Oregon in October, 1873, and proved to have been the best importation ever made to our State. Seventeen of these Merino Bucks last year sheared 331½ pounds, ranging from 16 to 25 pounds averaging exactly 19½ lbs. to the fleece. The fleeces of the Ewes last year averaged 14½ lbs. and this year they average over 10 lbs. to the fleece. My Bucks are not yet sheared this spring.

These sheep are PERFECTLY HEALTHY and thoroughly acclimated, and show great improvement on our soil, both as to size of animals and weight of fleece.

ALSO, FOR SALE.
Thoroughbred English Cotswold Bucks and Ewes.
As fine as are on the Coast.

My Cotswold Bucks last year averaged 14½ lbs., Ewes 11 lbs. to the fleece.

☞ Address me at PORTLAND, or visit the ranch where my agent will show the stock and the sample fleeces. Sample fleeces can be seen at L. GOLDSMITH & CO.'S, Portland.

as they paraded through the streets. Whe the cemetery was reached, the members of th respective companies and their friends fir visited the grave of the late Capt. C. S. Mill who was so long captain of the Washingto Guard. Fragrant flowers were strewn abo the grave, and an appropriate refrain w played by the band. In like manner th graves of a number of those buried in th

CITY.

PARADE AND DECORATION.—It being impracticable for the members of the several military companies of the city to turn out on Saturday and participate in the ceremonies of Memorial Day in conjunction with the G. A. R., the members of the Washington Guard and Portland Light Battery concluded to march over to Lone Fir Cemetery yesterday, and decorate the graves of those who had served in the late war. Two o'clock was the hour designated for the procession to move. The Northwestern band was engaged for the occasion and at the hour appointed marched out to the armory of the Light Battery, where the members were in readiness to move. Preceded by the band the procession marched down to the armory of the Washington Guard. That company joined the procession when the line of march was taken up for the cemetery. Several hacks and buggies accompanied the procession, in which were seated a number of ladies and gentlemen. A large number of handsome bouquets were taken over to the cemetery in an express wagon which were to be strewn about the graves. The Washington Guard, under command of Capt H. Cook, and the Light Battery, commanded by Capt Tom Mountain, appeared in full uniform and presented a very handsome, soldierly appearance as they paraded through the streets. When the cemetery was reached the members of the two companies and their friends first repaired to the grave of the late Capt C S Mills, who was so long captain of the Washington Guard. Fragrant flowers were strewn about the grave, and an appropriate refrain was played by the band. In like manner the graves of a number of those buried in the Lone Fir and St Mary's Cemeteries were graced. After some time spent in decorating the graves, the procession returned to the city and disbanded.

PASSENGERS.—The steamship John L. Stephens sailed from San Francisco on Saturday for Portland, having on board the following passengers: A. Bush and three daughters, Mrs A. Lowndale, Miss J. Grey, A. N. Reed, wife and daughter, Col Tappan, A. J. Pope, J. [illegible] T. Drake, E. Hilton, I. H. B. Cown, [illegible] J. Bateman, C. Trendsdale, I. S. Smith, J. [illegible], Miss E. J. Brasfield, Mrs S. Todhunter, Mrs W. R. Matthews, Miss L. Beck, Miss I. C. Traver, T. M. Johnson, S. Owens, A. W. Johnson, C. D. Parkhurst, D. M. Moran, J. Campbell, A. Hamason, J. E. Brigham, G. M. [illegible], Mrs S. Owens, Miss K. Connor, Miss R. Lachmont, J. J. Parker and family, F. D. Matthews, J. F. Overholt, M. Wolf, P. Parker, C. J. Hayden and wife, L. S. Millikin and wife, [illegible] and family, C. Dessetor and wife, J. B. Lawton and wife, Mrs A. Skinner, Mrs J. W. Curry and three children, H. A. Young, Geo. Keyes, R. H. Malden, M. Martin, T. Tibbetts, L. Singstock, Mrs. F. Gardner and child, H. Watkins, O. Olson, G. Kingborn and family, J. B. S. Case and family, J. B. Smith and family, T. C. Naylor and family, Mrs A. Ingalls, Mrs M. A. Johnson and two children, M. L. Pipes and wife, Mrs Bridget Jones and [illegible] in the steerage.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—But few incidents transpired Saturday afternoon in connection with the marching of the soldiers and the arrival and departure of the troops which were not pleasant. One of the Vancouver soldiers, however, had a narrow escape from drowning. Just as he was stepping on board the Vancouver, after the procession had left the court house in the evening, his foot slipped and he stumbled towards the water, between the boat and the wharf. Luckily some person grabbed him by the hair as he fell, else we might have had to record his death by drowning.

UNOCCUPIED LAND.—From a person who has recently been traveling in a region of country situated 23 miles east of Portland on the other side of Sandy, we learn that there is considerable unoccupied railroad and timber land there, and that it would need but little cultivation to make it productive and fertile. The ingress and egress to the place are commendable features, besides the fact that it is but one and a half miles from the Columbia river. The land is not very heavily timbered. Immigrants might do well by making inquiries regarding the place.

SOCIABLE.—The Ladies Social Union, in order to make the exercises at the Taylor street church, Wednesday evening, more interesting and enjoyable, propose to have refreshments of various kinds provided for the guests. Ice cream, cake, candies, etc., can be purchased in the basement of the church, both before and after the concert. During the intermission the audience is invited to partake of the dainties which will be willingly dispensed, both to performers and all who wish to partake.

VISITED THE ASYLUM.—The North Portland M E Sunday school visited, in the Monitor wagon, the insane asylum, on Saturday afternoon. The school sang a number of their sweetest hymns on arriving at the building, and the inmates crowded to the windows to hear their songs and to see their smiling faces. After these exercises, strawberries were plucked in abundance and then the little folks returned home happy.

OUR SOLDIERS' GRAVES.

OBSERVANCE OF THE CEREMONIES OF DECORATION DAY BY THE MEMBERS OF THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC AT LONE FIR CEMETERY—PARADE [illegible] AND ADDRESS BY GEN O O HOWARD

By order issued from the head of the department of the Grand Army of the Republic Saturday May 29th was designated as the day on which the annual celebration of the simple but beautiful ceremonies of strewing with fragrant flowers the graves of the dead soldiers who served in the late war. The event was duly commemorated in this city by the members of Canby and Baker Post G. A. R., the officers connected with the Headquarters of the Department of the Columbia and the soldiers stationed at the garrison at Vancouver.

At 10 30 A M the military at Vancouver, consisting of detachments of Companies B and H of the 21st Regiment U S A, accompanied by the Regimental Band, arrived on the steamer from Vancouver in response to an order from General Howard. These detachments numbering about 40 men were in charge of Captain Evan, Adjutant of the 21st Infantry, and under command of Lieutenant Duncan. At the wharf the troops were met by a delegation of the G. A. R. and escorted to their armory, corner of Third and Alder streets. The companies were then disbanded until the hour designated for forming the procession—2 o'clock. Promptly at 2 o'clock the procession was formed on Third street, right resting on Alder, as follows: Officer of the day George C. Sears and aid; regimental band; detachments of Companies B and H; Portland City Band; color bearers of the United States and post flags; members of Canby and Baker Post. Following the post came several carriages in which were seated the following officers: Major General Howard, Paymaster General Eaton, General Babbitt, Major Rucker, Major Bell, Captain Wilkinson, Captain Sim[illegible], [illegible] Lieutenant Boyle, Captain Mason, Captain Sladen, Rev. T. L. Eliot chaplain.

When the procession was put in motion the following route of march was observed: Up Third street to Alder, down Alder to First, down First to Ash, up Ash to Fourth, up Fourth to Yamhill, down Yamhill to First, down First to Stark, down Stark to the ferry and from thence to the Lone Fir Cemetery.

For an hour before the procession moved a constant stream of humanity began to pour in the direction of the City of the Dead. Nearly every person—man, woman or child—was bearing a basketful of fragrant flowers or handsome bouquets which were to be strewn about the graves of departed loved ones. By the time the procession reached the cemetery at least 1,500 persons had assembled. Reaching the cemetery the procession filed through the open gate, the band discoursing the appropriate air Hail Columbia. Arriving at the grave of the late Dr. H. A. Bodman the procession deployed and formed a hollow square. Rev. T. L. Eliot offered a brief prayer at the commencement of the ceremonies, followed with an appropriate air by the band. Post Commander W. S. Newbury then advanced and said:

Ladies and Gentlemen and Comrades of the G. A. R.: I suppose it is well understood by all that I am not expected to deliver anything like an oration as our time and programme will not permit of it.

We have assembled here to-day, not merely for the gratification of an idle curiosity, but that we may by these simple and impressive ceremonies show our respect to the memory of the nation's patriot dead.

We have come here in no narrow or sectional spirit and I trust that our patriotism is broad enough to embrace the whole land and our charity sufficient to include all law abiding citizens of every State comprising this grand old republic which henceforth is to be one and undivided. We have hopes that the youth who witness these ceremonies as each memorial day shall roll around may learn full well their import, and that they may have an abiding respect for constitutional liberty, the flag of the Republic and the nation's patriot dead.

A 'response' was rendered by the Amphion Club with good effect, when Judge J. H. Woodward stepped to the side of the grave, and after strewing a handful of flowers, said:

Comrades: In grateful remembrance of the gallant deeds of the nation's dead we strew flowers on the graves of our departed comrades. Earth yields no freer tribute to the joy of man than her floral product. And it is fitting that with gathered flowers in the midst of our joys, we make our pilgrimage year by year to the city of the dead, and, in this solemn presence, renew our pledge of brotherhood and loyalty to our country. And show, too, that with enmity to none and with charity toward all we cherish the memory of the [illegible] who fell, whether in the blue or the gray, and do not forget the lesson their deaths have taught nor the glorious inheritance they have bequeathed us.

Following this came a solemn dirge by the band.

Comrade V. B. DeLashmutt advanced, strewed flowers about the grave and said:

As the sun's warmth pervades all nature and sends new life coursing through every vein, so may the good deeds of those who [illegible] memory we build stir us up to grander victories and greater achievements. Like them may we not only work for our homes and our common country but for all humanity. Like them may we forget ourselves and cheerfully reach forth our hands in our country's aid. If misguided still more it needs a helping hand, and wherever we finish our work may it be done so well that we shall not be unwept, unhonored and unsung. We seek to emulate the lives and deeds of those whose graves are scattered all over our fair land. No marble monuments may mark their last home, but every patriot sheds a tear in loving remembrance of them, and even our children honor their valor, and where to-day no martial strains are heard the wind wails a sad requiem.

Comrade Geo. C. Sears, after casting flowers upon the grave, said:

To the patriotism and courage of the brave men who laid their lives upon the altar of the republic this tribute of a country's gratitude and a comrade's affection is paid. These graves, which we feebly honor, are monuments to our country's greatness more lasting than the stately piles antiquity raised over the ashes of her heroes, for,

Where kings in dusty darkness hid
Have left a nameless pyramid,
These heroes, though the general doom
Have swept the column from their tomb,
A mightier monument will command,
The memory of their native land.

A solemn hymn was rendered by the Amphion Club and the ceremonies were concluded. The procession then reformed and marched back to the city and then disbanded until 7 o'clock P. M. At that hour the procession formed at the corner of Third and Alder streets and, preceded by the regimental band, marched to the court house where the address was to be delivered by General Howard. The immense auditorium of the court house was crowded to overflowing by the citizens of Portland who had assembled to listen to the address. Order was called and after The Red White and Blue by the regimental band Gen. Howard was introduced and delivered the following address:

General Howard's Address

INTRODUCTION—DECORATION DAY COMPARED AND CONTRASTED WITH INDEPENDENCE DAY

[illegible] Comrades—Ladies and Gentlemen: What the Fourth of July has been for a century to the American people, a yearly commemoration of the Declaration of the Independence of the United States, which declaration was made of value and secured by a seven years war, such in substance is the 30th day of May—an anniversary commemorating the new birth of our Republic. It calls up the memories of those of our comrades who gave the sacrifice of their lives in order to consummate this grand result. It does not dispense with the Fourth—but it precedes it, as in the order of the church ritual the [illegible] of the cross and passion precede those of the crown, the joy and glory of the resurrection. We to-day remember the costly sacrifice—the lives laid on our country's altar, and strew flowers upon the graves where their [illegible], while we hail the jubilee of a nation's [illegible] and glory over the liberty [illegible] subsequently twice confirmed.

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED—A STAY AT HOME CONFEDERATE—THE FEELINGS OF SOLDIERS [illegible]

A few days ago in a neighboring city, the next day after a lecture had been delivered on the battle of Gettysburg, an officer of the army heard a conversation between an American gentleman and several Germans concerning the lecture. The American remarked that he was a Southern man. That it was time all this talk about the war was hushed—the war was over, the troubles settled [illegible] bitter feelings to recall them. The German opposed him and argued in favor of keeping fresh the record. The [illegible] after a time inquired: "Sir, were you in the Confederate army?" "No [illegible] I have been [illegible] on this coast."

The class of men of which this American is a representative can hardly be satisfied. History itself will necessarily annoy them. But this is not the case with those who were opposed to us in the field. I have met many a Confederate officer since the war and never without a pleasant conversation recalling the battles in which we were both engaged. Our own soldiers do not mean that their valiant deeds nor those of their comrades shall be forgotten, and every brave opponent I have met seems equally unwilling to blot out his record. I noticed a remark made by one of [illegible] prominent generals in Richmond, Virginia, in reply to a speech of a late Confederate officer, Bradley T. Johnson, which may at first [illegible] growing [illegible] who have [illegible] developed [illegible] the noble qualities of American manhood. It has left to us soldiers—once foes, now friends—a memory of hard fought battles, of fearful sacrifice, of heroic valor, and has taught a lesson to be transmitted to our children, that divided we are terrible, united we are forever invincible. This speech, which was made to Southern soldiers with demonstrations of applause, does not imply the repression of history, but on the contrary [illegible] to be transmitted.

It is the very thing gentlemen you propose by a memorial day—a commemoration of sacrifices, of valor, and the constant teaching to your children those lessons whose primary record was written in toil and suffering and in blood.

[illegible] RESOLUTION AGAINST MEMORIALS

On [illegible] Charles Sumner, doubtless entertaining a strong desire to exhibit to the conquered a magnanimity that in the past he had not been believed by them to entertain, introduced into the Senate a series of resolutions looking to the doing away with those public memorials and insignia that would perpetually remind our people, north and south, of the great civil strife then brought to a close. His popularity suffered exceedingly from this cause, and you will remember how hard it became for the Massachusetts legislature to repeal its act of censure, though they were life long friends who were required to record their votes against him. And for one I am glad indeed, not that Mr Sumner had to endure the pain of censure—not that it was hard for his friends to obtain forgiveness for him, but I am glad that the loyal people of the land are not willing to mar the inheritance by dimming, ignoring or forgetting the brilliant record of her sons.

OBJECTIONS TO WAR ITSELF

But back of all this, back of the expediency in a national and social point of view of memorial occasions and emblems of our great struggle, lies a real objection touching the conscience of a large body of reasoning and thinking people. It is stated positively that war is wrong, wrong in itself; therefore the support given to it by praises and pæans to its heroes, by public reminders of its glories and its victories, and by enduring monuments to its honor, being calculated to foster a warlike spirit in the minds of the people and especially the young, is deceptive and injurious and has a tendency to block the wheels of genuine progress. Let us not shrink from looking this objection squarely in the face, for it is particularly unwise, even in self justification, to attempt to uphold a wrong principle, for sooner or later the right will prevail.

In order to have before us the objection against war strongly stated, listen to an English writer against war, Jonathan Dymond. He says: "No one pretends to applaud the morals of an army, and for its religion few think of it at all. A soldier is depraved even to a proverb. The fact is too notorious to be insisted upon that thousands who had filled their stations in life with propriety, and been virtuous from principle, have lost by a military life both the practice and the regard of morality; and when they have become habituated to the vices of war, have laughed at their honest and plodding brethren who are still spiritless enough for virtue or stupid enough for piety." The celebrated John Knox condenses his censures as follows: "It happens unfortunately that profligacy, libertinism and infidelity are thought by weaker minds almost as necessary a part of a soldier's uniform as his shoulder knot. To hesitate at an oath, to decline intoxication, to profess a regard for religion would be almost as ignominious as to refuse a challenge."

Before attempting to make answer let me refer to one (Charles Sumner) who never puts a statement obscurely. Thirty years ago in Boston, on the 4th of July, which he denominated the Sabbath of the nation, Chas. Sumner made his speech of speeches on "The True Grandeur of Nations." Once in conversation I heard him say [illegible] but one exhaustive speech—the others become more or less a modification of it—that on The Grandeur of Nations was my speech. And indeed Clay has none more ornate and beautiful, and Webster does not excel this in strength or grandeur of style; and were it not possible to appeal from Sumner during a time of profound peace to Sumner adding sinews to a gigantic war, I would not venture to call attention to his postulates in this connection. He asks in the outset: "Can there be in our age any peace that is not honorable, and any war that is not dishonorable?" Then goes on to say: "The true honor of a nation is to be found only in deeds of justice and beneficence, securing and advancing human happiness. In the clear eye of that Christian judgment which must yet prevail, vain are the victories of war, infamous its spoils. He is the benefactor and worthy of honor who carries comfort to wretchedness, dries the tear of sorrow, relieves the unfortunate, feeds the hungry, clothes the naked, does justice, enlightens the ignorant, unfastens the fetters of the slave, and finally, by virtuous genius in art, literature, science, enlivens and exalts the hours of life, or by generous example inspires a love for God and man. This is the Christian hero, this is the man of honor in a Christian land. He is no benefactor, nor worthy of honor, whatever his worldly renown, whose life is absorbed in feats of brute force, who renounces the great law of Christian brotherhood, whose vocation is blood. Well may old Sir Thomas Browne exclaim: 'The world does not know its greatest men!' for thus far it has chiefly honored the violent brood of battle, armed men springing up from the dragon's teeth sown by hate, and cared little for the truly good men, children of love, guiltless of their country's blood, whose steps on earth are noiseless as the angel's wing."

His picture of society may be suggested by this: "The mother rocking the infant on her knee stamps the images of war upon his tender mind, at that age more impressible than wax; she nurses his slumbers with its music, pleases his waking hours with its stories, and selects for his playthings the plume and the sword, [illegible] and when the youth becomes a man his country invites his services and holds before his bewildered imagination the prizes of worldly honor." Permit me one more picture from this speech: "Peaceful citizens volunteer to appear as soldiers, and affect in dress, arms and deportment what is called the pride, pomp and circumstance of glorious war."

Now the principle underlying Sumner's graphic descriptions, the real basis of his argument against the genius of war, we find stated by him succinctly as follows: "It is wrong and inglorious when individuals [illegible] can agree to determine their petty controversies by combat; it must be equally wrong and inglorious when nations consent and [illegible] to determine their vaster controversies by combat."

ANSWER—WAR DEFINED—SOMETIMES RIGHT

Now for an answer—that the soldier may not blush to wear his uniform nor hide his battle flag, nor strive to forget the names of the engagements in which he participated; that his [illegible] be not regarded as [illegible], or his children be taught to [illegible] of robbers, murderers and assassins.

It is not necessary to assert in opposition to the advocates of peace at any price that war is right. War is a contest between nations or states or between parts of the same state, and [illegible] waged for various purposes. In order [illegible] the controversy [illegible] and the other in the [illegible] of that civil party may be partly in the right and partly in the wrong. The commandment of God on which all the reasoning of extreme peace men is based is "Thou shalt not kill." The other translation is "Thou shalt do no murder." It was certainly never intended by the great Lawgiver that human life shall never be taken, for in those [illegible] the same Giver of law sanctioned and directed the taking of human life. And I believe it is a mistake to assert that the principles of law were ever changed by our Lord. He expressly states that He came not to destroy the law or the prophets but to fulfil. The teaching [illegible] principle was always the same as given by Moses when he says: "Thou shalt not avenge nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Our Lord's summary puts the whole in brief and comprehensive terms: "Love the Lord thy God with all thy heart [illegible] and thy neighbor as thyself."

The taking of human life is not necessarily contrary to this principle—this eternal law. A man may take life in self defense; he may strike the thief creeping into his house by night [illegible] his wife and children, or attempting to burn his house. Society may institute a police force, be it army or navy [illegible] uniformed policemen, the [illegible]. The exercise of extreme force often becomes absolutely necessary. The [illegible] the extreme sentence of the law and take human life almost never do it [illegible] to murderers. It is the final [illegible].

[illegible] SUMNER AGAINST HIMSELF

Notice how thoroughly Mr Sumner reversed his wheels in his speech in the Senate of the United States May 19th 1862, and how clearly and forcibly he states my view of the right of war. He says: "Harsh and repulsive as they are, the rights of war are unquestionably [illegible] the overruling, instinctive laws of self-defense, common to nations as to individuals. Every community having the functions of [illegible] sovereignty has a right to maintain at all hazards [illegible] defence of such life [illegible] may put forth all its energies. Any other principle would leave it the weakened prey to wicked men [illegible]."

THE MITIGATION OF WAR RIGHTS

This is all we ask—this is Charles Sumner's maturer thought, wrought out in the agony of that fearful struggle for national existence; and indeed my whole heart says to him a glad amen as he adds the following noble words: "[illegible] I rejoice to believe that civilization has already done much to mitigate the rights of war, and it is among the cherished visions which present events cannot make me renounce, that the time is coming when all these rights will be further softened to the mood of permanent peace." Yes indeed, more and more do the ministrations of love follow close upon the rights of war. The minister of religion enters the dungeon of the criminal condemned to die; the missionary precedes and often prevents the warlike savage from making his meditated forays and attacks; the Christian commissions follow the armies to refresh and succor the sick and the wounded; and towards those plow shares of permanent peace civilized Christian men are seriously and actively projecting methods of settling controversies between themselves without the use of the sword.

THE HIGH JOINT COMMISSION—GRANT

The settlement of our recent difficulty with England without war is a wonderful fact, a stepping stone to a broader platform of international law, and a general tribute to the moral courage, pure fairness and clear sighted wisdom of General Grant; and I think a far distant historian will [illegible] nevertheless written peace [illegible].

SHERMAN AND THE CITIZENS OF ATLANTA

You cannot forget the words of Sherman in 1864 to the citizens of Atlanta: "But my dear sirs, when that peace does come you may call upon me for anything. Then will I share with you the last cracker and watch with you to shield your home and family against danger from any quarter [illegible] once admit [illegible] more acknowledge the authority of the general government, and instead of devoting your houses and streets and roads to the dread uses of war, I and this army become at once your protectors and supporters, shielding you from danger, let it come from what quarter it may."

The genuine subordination of Grant and Sherman to the authority over them was shared by all the million of men, with few exceptions, who bore arms against the rebellion; and that little pregnant phrase of our leader, "Let us have peace," penetrated every true soldier's breast with responsive joy.

THE AMERICAN SOLDIER.

Neither John Knox of Scotland, Jonathan Dymond of England, nor the celebrated extremists of our own land have given us a fair portraiture of our American soldiery. A few unvarnished recitals of historic incidents will be better than argument. Here is one from Lexington one hundred years ago. Captain Robbins' son, a boy of ten years, heard the summons in the garret where he lay, and in a few minutes was on his father's old mare, a young Paul Revere, galloping along the road to rouse Captain Isaac Davis, who commanded the minute men of Acton. He was a young man of thirty, a gunsmith by trade, brave and thoughtful, and tenderly fond of his wife and four children. The company assembled at his shop, formed and marched a little way, when he halted them and returned a moment to his house. He said to his wife, "Take good care of the children," [illegible] turned to his men, gave the order to march, and saw his home no more. [illegible] Such was the history of that [illegible]. The heart of [illegible] women of Middlesex might break, but they could not waver. They had [illegible]. They knew whom they served, and as the midnight summons came they started up and answered, "Here am I." He [illegible] a type of the men that broke the British yoke—our [illegible], thoughtful and tenderly loving his family.

COLONEL JOHN T. GREBLE

How carefully the orators [illegible] the names of those who first met the enemy and gave up their lives in the procurement of our liberties: the first resistance to aggression, the first death became the first fruits for honor in the harvest of history. As in the Revolution, so it is or will be in the sifted story of the great Rebellion. The first regular officer slain in this war was my intimate friend Lieutenant John T. Greble. He was promoted to the grade of Colonel for his conspicuous gallantry and meritorious conduct on the field of his death, in the battle of Big Bethel in Virginia, the 10th day of June 1861. President Lincoln said of him, that of all those who had fallen or who had distinguished themselves in the present contest, it was his deliberate judgment that not one had acted so heroically nor deserved so well of his country as Lieutenant Greble. Another officer, Lieutenant Kingsbury (afterwards himself killed in the war), wrote the wife, Mrs. Greble, from near the battle ground. I select from his letter a picture that speaks volumes. "It will, I know, be among your pleasantest recollections to be assured that scarcely an hour of the day passed that your husband did not make some remark to me which betokened his love for his wife and babies. The letters he received from you were read [illegible] with a father's [illegible] the prattle of his little [illegible]. The morning before [illegible] I entered his tent and found him reading his Bible. Then again he expressed his desire to see you and his children. Speaking of his premonitions of death on that field [illegible]." Before he entered the battle field he traced in pencil on paper words of love for his cherished wife, of care for his now orphaned children, of affection for his parents and friends, and of trust in Almighty God. This gives value to his manly daring, showing that it was no blood thirsty impulse or reckless presumption, but a pervading sense of the call of duty and his country's need. His view sanctifies his martyrdom. It [illegible] the field of battle with noblest [illegible] gentleness, ambition and benevolence, but wrought to a high enthusiasm and a calm [illegible] courage by a real love of country and of mankind.

Beautiful in daily life, beautiful in character, beautiful in tender love for a precious family, beautiful in the symmetry and completeness of a brief career, and beautiful in death, when the little son [illegible] smiled his recognition upon the marble and coffined face. Yea, more beautiful in this living glory [illegible] beyond the dark [illegible] of battle. Thou art in life and death standing [illegible] against the calumny that would [illegible].

[illegible]

Perhaps as peerless a man as could be found in all [illegible] was the adjutant of the Tenth Connecticut volunteers, Lieutenant H. W. Camp. [illegible] the necessity of [illegible] and hate exhibited by [illegible] the issue of the struggle for the nation's life [illegible] the battle of Fort Fisher [illegible] all aglow with excitement [illegible] affection [illegible] true courage and firmest faith. It was never more [illegible] place of death [illegible] the peerless Christian soldier said with [illegible] and earnestness [illegible] his [illegible] in the Lord: "No, no, dear fellow, I do not doubt—I do trust Jesus fully, wholly."

THE OFFICER [illegible] CORRECTIVE INFLUENCES

The soldiery of course partook of all the varied kaleidoscopic character of our population, and whether or not as a general rule they became worse morally in consequence of their army experience is not easy to determine. Men who get the mining fever and congregate in large numbers, separate from home, wives, children and refining society, are apt to present no very comforting phases of human nature. The hunter, the fisherman, the seamen, the lumbermen, and all men drawn together away from the society and influence of ladies, become comparatively rough in manners, habits and language. Similar effects do we find in the army, but there is in the service a counteracting discipline. Wrong doing is discouraged and punished, while good conduct is constantly encouraged, good deeds commended and conspicuous [illegible]. From personal knowledge I can testify that many men become better.

PRIVATE McDONALD

I remember McDonald, of the Fourth [illegible]. Always faithful to his soldier duties. He abandoned drinking and profanity in the army. I cannot forget his last words to me: "How glad I am, General, that I am wounded and not you."

HARRY STINSON

I recall Harry Stinson of the Fifth Maine, whose reformation was completed while a prisoner of war. He was afterwards promoted, and till his death some years after exhibited all the graces of a pure, constant and self denying life.

A SOLDIER OF THE SIXTH CORPS

A visitor to an army hospital speaks of a soldier of the Sixth corps who lost his right arm close to the shoulder. "Day by day I found him cheery and uncomplaining. At first he was overflowing with fun all the time, but at last the terrible heat and strain upon his system so much reduced his strength that there was only a merry twinkle in his eye (when I came in) and a word of cordial greeting [illegible] when he dropped his musket and reached round to take his useless arm tenderly in his left hand and walk off the field under a shower of balls, it was his first time off duty after thirteen battles since he entered the service." Low spirits or complaint seemed impossible to him.

SERGEANT AT MISSIONARY RIDGE

Hon. E. P. Smith, now commissioner of Indian affairs, is responsible for the following. I wish he had given the soldier's name. Take this as a type of our soldiers' loyalty to the country's flag and of unselfish devotion to the very end. "During the charge up the Ridge (Missionary) four soldiers were seen bearing back a comrade on a blanket. When they laid down their burden I knelt down by him and said: 'Sergeant, where did they hit you?' 'Most up the Ridge, sir.' 'I mean, Sergeant, where did the ball strike you?' 'Within twenty yards of the top—almost up.' 'No, no, Sergeant, think of yourself for a moment; tell me where you are wounded.' And throwing back the blanket, I found his upper arm and shoulder mashed and mangled with a shell. Turning his eye to look for the first time upon his wound, the Sergeant said: 'That is what did it. I was hugging the standard to my blouse and making for the top. If they had let me alone a little longer—two minutes longer—I should have planted the colors on the top. Almost up, almost up.'" [illegible] his own regiment rallying under the colors that had dropped from his shattered arm, was shouting the victory for which the poor sergeant had given his young life, but of which he was dying without the sight.

CONCLUDING SUMMARY

I could multiply instances, but these few are sufficient to suggest that in this country an army and morality and religion in the army; that the soldier is not depraved to a proverb; that virtue and piety are not so rare as to be simply subjects of ridicule; that profligacy, libertinism and infidelity are not by any means a necessary part of a soldier's uniform; that profanity, drunkenness, infidelity and duelling are not the special characteristics of our army. These crimes, it is owned with shame and sorrow, prevail in our land, and more or less afflict and curse the best regulated company, but the army is not conspicuous in these or any other vileness. The Grand Army, of which your Post is but a segment, can easily furnish the record proof of soldiers who, like Thomas, Canby, Lisk, Mitchell and a host of others, have been conspicuous in deeds of justice and beneficence, securing and advancing human happiness; of soldiers who, like Greble, Camp and Stinson, have carried comfort to wretchedness and dried the tears of sorrow; of soldiers who, like Schofield, Swayne, Sprague and Griffin, have relieved the unfortunate, fed the hungry, clothed the naked, dealt justly, and enlightened the ignorant; of soldiers who, like Grant, Sherman, Butler and a multitude of others, unfastened the fetters of the slave and let the captive go free. Your soldiers are not at all times enrolled. They come from the farm and the store, from the shop and the factory, from the country and the city, from the learned professions and the common schools, from all classes and conditions of society, and from all parts of the world, to swell the ranks of our all embracing army of freedom. We will make no aggressive war to extend dominion—to strengthen slavery or perpetuate its spirit and power; but let monarchists, monopolists and oligarchists understand that we are no craven people, that the law of self preservation—the grand instinctive law of all creation—is written deep in the hearts of millions of men, women and children between the shores of the Atlantic and the Pacific. We will not barter our liberties of trade, of schools, nor of religion, for any delusive dream of a redistribution of wealth, for any plan of a security against false teaching in the schools, of any governmental procurement of a universal external unity of Faith. No, no. We give generous welcome to the highest and broadest and deepest reaches of human thought and contrivance, and as far as possible cripple and narrow and enslave men, women and children no more.

Our brave soldier dead, whom you so properly honor to-day, have sealed these principles with their blood beyond recall. The maimed man cries out often in the bitterness of poverty, "The government has forgotten my service." Remember the government is not the men in office nor at any time. The government is by the people. I thank God his heart for the people are around and near to befriend him, and they or some of them will remember his sacrifice. Imbecility and corruption and injustice must yield. For the land has been redeemed from thralldom by the shedding of precious blood, and the people, trusting in God, have accepted the sacrifice.

The Quaker heart of Whittier condenses the historic and prophetic truth:

I dreamed of freedom slowly gained
By martyr meekness, patience, faith,
And lo! an athlete grimly stained,
With corded muscles battle strained,
Shouting it from the fields of death!

I turn me awe struck from the sight,
Among the clamoring thousands mute,
I only know that God is right,
And that the children of the light
Shall tread the darkness under foot.

I know the pent up fire heaves its crust,
That sultry skies the bolt will form
To smite them clear, that nature must
The balance of her powers adjust,
Though with the earthquake and the storm.

God reigns, and let the earth rejoice!
I bow before His sterner plan,
Dumb are the organs of my choice;
He speaks in battle's stormy voice,
His praise is in the wrath of man.

Yet surely as He lives the day
Of peace He promised shall be ours,
To fold the flags of war and lay
Its sword and spear to rust away,
And sow its ghastly fields with flowers.

PICNICS.

The [illegible] picnic will take place Saturday next.

A picnic will be given by the Baptist and Congregational Sunday schools of the city on Saturday June 12th. Full particulars in time.

It [illegible] the Red Men propose to hold their annual picnic and excursion on Wednesday of the present week. Like the Red Men and their numerous friends, we sincerely hope that the day [illegible] will prove [illegible] all [illegible] be desired. A bright and pleasant day is all that is needed to make a grand time.

One of the most successful and enjoyable picnics of the season was held yesterday at Caruthers' Garden by the Portland Turn Verein society. The members of the society formed at their hall at an early hour and marched out to Caruthers' Garden headed by the Port and City Band. The entire day was spent by the Turners and their numerous friends in dancing, quaffing beer and partaking of refreshments, of which there was an abundance. During the day the garden was visited by hundreds of our citizens and there were hacks, buggies and express wagons constantly coming from and going to the city. Although a great many persons visited the ground, a much larger crowd would have been in attendance had it not been for the threatening condition of the weather. The day was cloudy and quite cool and showers fell at intervals, but there was not rain enough to seriously interfere with the pleasures of those in attendance. Quite late in the evening the Turners and their friends returned to the city. It was a very pleasant affair and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Thoroughbred Sheep for Sale.

Mr Joseph Teal advertises in this issue that he has a large number of fine Merino bucks and ewes for sale at his ranch, seven miles from Harrisburg in Linn county. Also some of the finest Cotswolds ever brought to this State. We give below the pedigrees of the Merinos, which are of the Monson and Jewett importation of 187-.

SALEM Oct 15, 1873

Mr J. TEAL—Sir: The twenty seven ewes I have this day sold to you were bred as follows: Those with notch under right ear were raised and bred by D. W. & J. Lord and G. J. Hollenbeck of Hoosac, N. Y., and sired by the buck Gen Grant, he by Hammond's Gold Mine, out of a Rich ewe. Dams were sired by Silver Mine, and bred by E. Hammond, of Vermont. The balance of them were bred and raised by Samuel Jewett of Independence, Mo., formerly of Addison county, Vermont, and were sired by his stock ram "Green Mountain," he by the James ram, he by the Victor Wright ram of Shoram, Vt. Mr. Jewett has, within the last three years, taken seven first premiums and four [illegible] in different States on his ram Green Mountain."

The day has been a sort of half-holiday in the city, and the volume of business has been small compared with other days of the week. No important transactions are noticed, the monetary condition being just as at that heretofore described, loans being readily negotiated at current rates either at the city banks or with outside parties. Though no plethora by any means exists in the money market, there is quite an ample supply of available funds for the current demand, owing principally, we believe, to the fact that local improvements and manufacturing enterprises are not moving forward with any activity. This fact is not only applicable to Oregon but to most other sections of the United States even with more force than to our own State.

In trade of a local character we hear of but little that is of general importance to our readers. The wholesale and jobbing departments of mercantile business show much less activity than was experienced a few weeks ago, and the spring trade is virtually over. The produce market shows no changes in quotations since our last review, and with a moderate degree of animation, matters move on in the accustomed channels. The receipts in this line are not large, and with the usual demand, prices are well sustained and as high as usual at the beginning of the summer months.

Shipping Intelligence.

The steamship John L. Stephens sailed from San Francisco for Portland at the usual hour to-day, with freight and passengers.

The steamship Gussie Telfair sailed for Victoria and Port Townsend, with a fair freight, at 6 o'clock this evening.

The steamship California will sail for Sitka and intermediate ports on Tuesday next.

The bark Carn Tual has her cargo nearly all discharged, and will begin to receive wheat early next week.

The ship City of Vienna will probably commence to discharge ballast next week.

The schooner Oregonian has finished discharging a full cargo of merchandise at Pacific wharf.

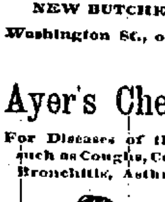
Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.



The few compositions, which have won the confidence of mankind and become household words, among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured so wide a reputation, or maintained it so long as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long continued series of marvellous cures that have won for it a confidence in its virtues, never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed the Cherry Pectoral has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well founded if the remedy be taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR
TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY & COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

Ayer's Hair Vigor, by long and extensive use has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately, often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color, when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hairs resume their original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions, diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the Vigor is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

COUGHS, HOARSENESS, INFLUENZA,

Sore Throat, Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, Liver Complaint, Bronchitis, Asthma, Bleeding of the Lungs, and every affection of the Throat, Lungs and Chest, are speedily and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.

This well-known preparation does not dry up a cough and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most medicines, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

by a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors. None genuine unless signed I. BUTTS. SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Proprietors, Boston. Sold by REDINGTON, HOSTETTER & CO., San Francisco, and by dealers generally.
